Introduction The architecture world is becoming more and more advanced in its technological nature. Designs have changed a lot over the past few years, more than ever before and, as a result, the functionality of structures has improved dramatically. In this day and age, most of the architectural proposals are digital, meaning that they are represented on computers. However, in the real world, these types of projects are almost always presented in paper format, but that is just the first step. After the digital rendering of the proposed project is finished, the next thing that an architect has to do is go out and present the design to the public. Of course, in the real world, the only way to do this is by physically showing the building. But this isn't all: the architectural visualizations must be created as well, so that the client can be informed about the architectural design of the building. This type of visualizations can be done on a variety of means, but let's get to our point: today we are looking at the Adobe Illustrator version of the architectural visualization of a proposed skyscraper in Midtown Manhattan, USA. For those who don't know, architecture is the art of building, so a building is not just a piece of construction but also a piece of art and the design of this skyscraper is no exception. This proposed skyscraper will be the world's first completely transparent skyscraper, and the architectural design of this project is sure to make a statement about the future of the skyscraper in the 21st century.
